

Tamiko Usability Notes

general UI / layout

- tried resizing the floating nav menu and made it too tiny to use. "whoops, i shrunk it way too much." definitely needs a shrink limit so the UI doesn't disappear.
- hates the hint boxes. says the text in the title and header is super unhelpful, repetitive, and just full of text. "this is just a wall of text, i'm not reading all that".
- wants the calendar plan options to be persistent. "i want to see my calendar plan right here all the time." says they should always be on the screen for quick access.
- grabbed and moved the window anchor to get it out of her way.

gestures & navigation

- got a bit confused and tried to physically tap the display. "wait, is this a touchscreen?".
- using the pinching gesture fine, but she accidentally triggered the end of the workout. "oh no, did i just cancel the whole thing?".
- strongly recommends adding a cooldown to the exit gesture so users don't accidentally end the workout if they move their hands wrong.
- said there needs to be an "are you sure?" confirmation screen before the workout actually closes out.

onboarding & plans

- went through the onboarding flow, seemed a bit tedious.
- suggested adding a drop down plan filter to make searching for routines easier. "would be way faster if this was just a dropdown".
- wants to see all the available workout plans directly from the workout mode screen, rather than having to navigate all the way back out.

in-workout experience

- couldn't easily spot what exercise she was supposed to be doing. "where does it actually say what i'm doing?" needs the move name placed in a much more noticeable manner.
- the rest screen needs a total visual overhaul. she didn't realize she was on a break. suggested adding a more clear screen name, making the timer way bigger, and using a different color so it instantly registers as rest time.

- wants active feedback on how she's doing. "it's not telling me if my form sucks."
suggested the app should offer coaching if it detects your form is not good enough.
